

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method of processing congestion conditions of a MTP user part in the SS7 network is disclosed. According to the method, a congestion condition is identified, and information regarding the condition is transmitted in a MTP user part to an originating signaling point. The originating signaling point reduces traffic to be transmitted to the MTP user part of the congested destination, thereby preventing an interruption of service.